This property in the village of Charlton All Saints is a 1930's semi with a lovely east facing garden with views across the Avon Valley.

The clients wanted to extend their house and already had some drawings, prepared by a local technician. They felt however that they wanted a scheme that maximise the potential of the aspect of the garden, providing them with plenty of light and giving the house a less conventional extension. In 2002 they asked Paul Stevens Architecture to prepare a scheme that answered this brief.

The resulting extension provided an enlarged master bed room and en-suite shower room, with a new kitchen, living room and utility room.
